WANT QUIET SUNDAY

Hearing on Proposed Bills
Given by Commissioners.

RABBI SIMON ENTERS PROTEST

"Day of Rest" Advocated by One
Speaker—Proposition Supported by Representatives of Labor Unions.
Combated by Speakers as Unconstitutional—Religious Legislation.

Hearing was given yesterday morning by the Commissioners on the several bills pending before Congress bearing on Sunday closing in the District.

At 10 o'clock more than 100 persons had crowded into the board room of the District Building, and speeches were in order after Commissioner Macfarland, presiding, said: "The Commissioners have appointed this hearing on certain bills proposing Sunday laws which have been referred to them by the House Committee on the District of Columbia, according to the custom respecting proposed legislation for the District. The Commissioners, as in every such case, desire to ascertain the views of citizens before making a report to Congress. I may state for information that there is now no Sunday law in the District of Columbia, except for the closing of saloons and barber shops, and a police regulation preventing theatrical performances. The Court of Appeals, in a test case, brought by the Commissioners, has recently decided that the Maryland statute of the eighteenth century, prohibiting all labor on Sunday and providing penalties in pounds of tobacco, is obsolete."

W. H. Singleton, the first speaker, advocated Sunday closing, bringing in the day of rest theory.

Churches the Movers.

In answer to him W. A. Cole, secretary of the Religious Liberty Bureau, advanced the argument that the proposed legislation would be unconstitutional. He said that it was not a question of workmen taking a day off for rest without fear of discharge, but a move beyond the authority of Congress. He put the churches as the prime movers in the crusade, and said it was the religious organizations that were back of it.

Charles F. Diggs, as attorney for the Retail Grocers' Association, spoke next, and placed himself on record as in favor of the Langley bill, which provides for the closing of stores and certain other places on Sunday.

F. P. B. Sands spoke for the Sunday closing legislation, and as attorney for the Washington Butchers' Association, said that there is no necessity for storekeepers to keep their shops open on Sundays, even for public convenience.

James L. Feeney, of the Central Labor Union, pointed out that it would be advisable to try to avoid making any man work seven days in one week. He declared there is an absolute necessity of one day of rest. "For the good of the laboring men," he put himself on record as in favor of the Sunday closing bills.

Commissioner Macfarland, after the hearing, said that the representatives of labor represented the party that the Commissioners really wanted to reach—the disinterested party, the party that is not dealing with the question from an unbiased point of view. The running of steel plants and factories in the District on Sunday was brought out in the course of the speeches made by the representatives of the labor unions, and they spoke in favor of closing all such plants.

Germans Make Protest.

F. A. Rocker, first vice president of the United German Societies of the District of Columbia, read the protest of that society against the proposed legislation. These resolutions declared that any further restrictive law would be in direct violation of the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence.

Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, spoke for the party that the Commissioners really wanted to reach—the disinterested party, the party that is not dealing with the question from an unbiased point of view. The running of steel plants and factories in the District on Sunday was brought out in the course of the speeches made by the representatives of the labor unions, and they spoke in favor of closing all such plants.

In favor of the proposed legislation, Charles J. McGill, A. S. Clark, E. L. Stevens, of the Central Labor Union; H. I. Meador, of the Retail Grocers' Association, and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts were heard.

Rabbi Simon, who spoke against closing stores on Sunday, said: "If a Jew who kept his store open on Saturday were to ask my opinion as to his attitude on Sunday, I should advise him at once to close his store on Sunday for his personal and political advantages, for the respect of his fellow-men, and for the avoidance of an unfair competition. But I would not agree to forced closing. In other words, I come to protest against a compulsory legislation on the Sunday question. I object to the dragging in the force of the law to solve what lies in the duty of an education in self-respect. If this compulsory legislation views Sunday as the Sabbath, it is religious legislation, and is therefore pernicious. Phrasing notwithstanding, this is a religious question, and religious legislation, coercing or resting on the strong arm of the state, has come down to us in a cloak of shame."

Where Can He Smoke?

E. C. Hull, of the Stratford apartment house, has asked the District Commissioners, by what authority street railway companies eject a passenger for smoking on any part of the car except the three rear seats of an open trailer. On motion of Commissioner Morrow, the communication was referred to the Capital Traction Company and the Washington Railway and Electric Company.

To Prevent Theater Fires.

Steps are being taken by the District government to require that all moving-picture machines be inclosed in an iron booth, or hood, to reduce the danger of fire and loss of life in theaters. Recommendations have been made to the Commissioners by the electrical engineer of the District that managers of each of the moving-picture theaters be notified that each theater that operates a moving-picture machine must be provided with a booth, or inclosure, before April 1, 1908.
